DETAILED ACTION

1. Claims 31-49 are pending in this application; claims 31, and 42 independent.

The office acknowledges the cancellation of claims 1-30 and the addition of claims 31-49.

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 102

2. The text of those sections of Title 35, U.S. Code not included in this action can be found in a prior Office action.

Claims 31-34, 37, 42-44, and 46 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 102(e) as being anticipated by Furst (USPN 6,297,819).

3. Referring to claim 31, Furst discloses a method for presenting Internet content to a user of a computing device, comprising:

retrieving a first internet content that is programmed in a format readable by a web browser program (Figure 3; col. 7, line 35 to col. 8, line 46); and rendering the first internet content to provide a visual manifestation of the first internet content on an output means of the computing device, wherein the visual manifestation of the first internet content is not confined by a window of a Web browser program (Figure 5; col. 8, lines 39-46).

Art Unit: 2143

4. Referring to claim 32, Furst discloses the first Internet content comprises a definition of a frame for the visual manifestation (the Office takes the term "frame" to mean "outline or shape", and it must be inherent that the system of Furst to define a frame of the tool since third parties define the icon in which to display the tool, see col. 7, lines 44-50).

5. Referring to claims 33 and 34, Furst discloses the invention substantively as described in claims 31 and 32. Since claims 33 and 34 defines a second visual manifestation exactly the same as claims 31 and 32, and Furst discloses that multiple bar icons can be shown at the same (Figure 5, 502, 504, 506). Furst discloses another second internet content which produces a second visual manifestation not confined by a window of a browser.

6. Referring to claim 37, Furst discloses the Internet content comprises JavaScript (Jscript) (col. 5, line 2).

7. Referring to claim 42, Furst discloses the invention substantively as described in the claims listed above. Furst furthermore discloses a second visual manifestation of a frame through which the first visual manifestation is presented (the tool icon and the definition of the frame as seen in Figure 5, 502, 504, 506).

Art Unit: 2143

8. Referring to claim 43, Furst discloses the receiving step comprises receiving the internet content from the web (Figure 3 and related portions of the disclosure).

9. Referring to claim 44, Furst discloses the receiving step comprises retrieving the internet content from a memory of the computing device (it is understood that the web page must be stored in memory before it can be rendered) (Figure 3).

10. Claim 46 is rejected for similar reasons as stated above.

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 103

11. The text of those sections of Title 35, U.S. Code not included in this action can be found in a prior Office action.

Claims 35, 36, 38-41, and 45-49 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Furst.

12. Referring to claims 35, 36, and 45, Furst discloses the invention substantively as described in claim 31. Furst does not specify that the internet content comprises XML codes and XML tags for the frame definition. However it is well known that XML code is commonly downloaded over the Internet (i.e. web pages) and that in defining the frames of these web pages, XML tags are used in order to correctly define the frame. By this rationale it would have been obvious to one of ordinary skill in the art to include XML tags to the system of Furst to provide a more robust method of coding the icons and window bars associated with the invention, thereby allowing another method to provide third parties to code applications easily.

13. Referring to claims 38, Furst discloses the invention substantively as described above. Furst does not specifically disclose that JavaScript tags are used to define the frame of the window and bar. However it is well known that JavaScript has the capability of defining a frame for the tool and one of ordinary skill in the art would find it obvious to do so. By this rationale it would have been obvious to one of ordinary skill in the art to include JavaScript tags in the code in order to provide a more robust method of coding the icons and windows and a bar in order to provide a language in which many browsers understand, thereby increasing the accessibility of the invention.

14. Referring to claims 39-41 and 47-49, Furst discloses the invention substantively as described in claim 31. Furst does not disclose that the Internet content includes creating a media player, a calculator or accessing streaming media. However these functions are well known to exist and one of ordinary skill in the art (i.e. calculation applets are prevalent on the web, media players can be inserted into web browsers, which would stream media from servers) would find it obvious to be able to encode a visual manifestation of these applications in order to provide the viewing public a copy of the application, thereby increasing the knowledge of the general public.

Response to Arguments

15. Applicant's arguments with respect to claims 31-49 have been considered but are moot in view of the new ground(s) of rejection.
